SOMETHING DIFFERENT AND SOMETHING BETTER

The pleture shows how the tire travels in heating the oven. Put your tinger on the arrows and follow them across top, down the descending thre, over and back under the oven (which has been removed) then up the return the and out the smoke pipe and you'll understand how the fire travels in a Laurel Twhi-Fige Range when heating the oven.

See the fluc strips marked 13? The side strip 13 divides the space between back of stove and oven (which has been removed) and makes two and independent up and down thres-Nos. 9 and 14. The bottom strlp 13 divides part of the space under the oven thereby continuing fines 9 and 11beneath the oven. When you want to heat a Laurel oven you close damper No.

til-hs it is in the illustration. The hear then travels down the No. 11, circles around under oven bottom, rises through No. 9 and then out the smoke pipe,

Three Times the Heat From the Same Amount of Fuel

THE whole secret is in the "Twin Flues," which make the famous LAUREL the most economical range on the market. This flue construction heats all six holes instead of two, as in the usual single-flue range—three times the heat with the same amout of fuel.

The twin-flue system of the LAUREL permits you to heat the whole top without heating the oven. In no other range is it possible to do this. To heat the six covers of the ordinary range you must first heat the oven; a slow and costly system.

Let's look at the picture which explains how oven is so thoroughly, so quickly and so evenly heated.

You can see that fuel in a LAUREL DOES give greater service-after so directing its heat that every degree of it is absorbed before reaching the smoke pipe.

The side and hottom the strips also act as braces for the oven and prevent it from warping.

Remember, too, that because of the twin-flue system the heat remains in a LAUREL RANGE about t wice as long as it would in the ordinary range. Added proof that it does deliver MODE HEAT from a given quantity of fuel. Huy a range that retains the heat where it is needed.

Campaign Close.

> The night before the election, the two leading eandidates made their closing speeches. At the Itex rink there was a big crowd of men and women, evidently mostly Dutch, and when General Hotha arose to speak he was greeted by prolonged cheers, and while the speech was in English, the applause, the "lloos" and responses were in Dutch.

At the Capital rink Sir Percy spoke to equally as large a crowd as General Botha had, but nearly all
